Patriot Taxiway Industries Inc, Awarded Phase II Prototype Contract for Improved Approach Lighting Systems from FAA

September 27, 2011 - Lomira, WI

Patriot Taxiway Industries was awarded Phase II of a Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) contract to develop Light Emitting Diode (LED) replacement lamps with infrared (IR) emitter prototype development and production for improved approach lighting systems (Contract number DTFAWA-10-C-00072). The replacement LED/IR fixtures will be compatible with present Enhanced Flight Vision System technology, which aids the pilots to identify runways on approach in low visibility due to inclement weather.

Patriot was contracted by the FAA to conduct a feasibility study of the Medium Intensity Approach Lighting System with Runway Alignment Indicator Lights fixtures (MALSR) in late 2010. Based upon the results, Patriot proposed an LED/IR emitter light fixture designed to improve to the current system while provide energy saving costs for airport operations. Patriot will be delivering prototypes to the FAA for testing and evaluation in 2012.

"Patriot Taxiway Industries is a rural America company that is leading on the edge of innovation with LED and Infrared illumination supporting the FAA and the Nav-Aids they are developing for the NextGen of the National Aerospace System," stated Kevin McDermott, Vice President of Business Development.

Patriot Taxiway Industries is supporting the efforts of the Society of Automotive Engineers G-20 Airport lighting committee, which is addressing the concerns of aircraft avionics manufacturers, aircraft operators, airport operations in relation to the technologies affecting Enhanced Vision Systems and their use in the National Aerospace System.
